

Understanding Autism: What Public School Administrators Need to Know

Approximately 10,000 New Jersey students have an educational classification of autism. There are many anecdotal examples of how administrators drive effective programs, and virtually no examples of successful programs without administrative support. Learn more about autism, Asperger's Disorder, and PDDNOS, including strategies to address students' social, communicative, and behavioral needs. Maximize your resources by learning how to determine which interventions have empirical evidence supporting their use. Expand your leadership skills by learning how to most effectively support your staff to serve the complex and unique needs of these learners in various placements throughout the school. Superintendents, principals, and directors/supervisors of special services are invited to attend this free workshop which is based on the findings of a recent state-wide survey of public school administrators.

Presented by Elizabeth Neumann, BCaBA, Professional Services Coordinator and Linda Meyer, Ed.D., MPA, BCBA-D, CPT, Executive Director

While the event is offered free of charge, registration is required. Please fax or mail the form on the reverse side or register online at www.autismnj.org

All workshops will be held from 8:30 AM-12:30 PM. Participants will earn 4 professional development hours from the New Jersey Department of Education.
